

It is well past time for LNP to be implemented. The big companies that are against this, are only against it for their own selfish purposes. They know that many of their current customers are unhappy and looking to take their business elsewhere. Companies have kept these disgruntled customers in large part due to the lack of local number portability. It's time for the weak excuses to be put to rest, and choice given back into the hands of the American consumer.